WILLIAM A. GREEN JR.

Author of Rules for Radical Christians: Defending the Seven Mountains of Culture

Montgomery, Alabama · records remotely on your platform · rulesforradicalchristians.com

IN ONE PARAGRAPH

William writes about how the institutions ordinary believers work in — schools, companies, agencies, media, churches — are pulled away from Christian conviction, and what a person inside one can do about it without losing his job or his witness. He runs Capture Alerts, a working news desk documenting institutional capture daily; produces Field Cases, short narrated scenarios with the exact words to use; and built Ask, where a believer describes a bind at work, school or church and gets the words to say and the law in their state in a minute or two. He hosts the daily Rules for Radical Christians podcast, on Apple Podcasts, Spotify, Amazon Music and YouTube, and will carry your episode to his listeners. Documents first, Scripture throughout, and every conversation ends with something the listener can do on Monday.

EPISODE ANGLES

The Seven Mountains, in plain terms

Religion, family, education, government, media, arts, business — and why the same method is capturing all seven at once.

The words to use when your job asks you to affirm what you don't believe

A Field Case walked through beat by beat: the pressure, the temptation, and the one sentence that changes the ground the fight is on.

Bring me a listener's situation

The host reads a listener's bind on air: a statement to sign at work, a school notice with no opt-out, a rule at church. William walks it the way Ask does, what is being done to them, what to say, and the next step. Real answers, real laws, real world.

Everyone has a plan for America except the church

Why every other movement disciplines people toward a goal, and what it would take for a congregation to send its people into Monday with an assignment.

How institutions are actually taken

The procedural takeover, the redefinition of terms, manufactured consensus, the price of speech raised until silence is rational — each one with a current story.

Capture Alerts: reading the news like a field report

How a working news desk documents institutional capture in real time, and what listeners can do with one alert a day.

QUESTIONS TO ASK HIM

- What do you mean when you say the culture war has a map?
- Give us one story from this month where an institution was captured, and what a Christian inside it could have said.
- Why do you say a conviction gets redefined as conduct? How does that work in an office?
- What is the sentence you teach people to say when they are handed a statement to sign?
- What do people actually bring to Ask, and what does an answer look like?
- What should a pastor do differently on Sunday if he believes what you are describing?
- Which of the seven mountains are you standing on, and how does a listener find theirs?

AN OFFER FOR YOUR LISTENERS

Read at the close: "Every listener's first Ask is free at rulesforradicalchristians.com/ask. Describe what you are facing at work, at school, or in town, and get the words to say and the law where you live."

Or give the show its own door at rulesforradicalchristians.com/ask/shows: a link for the show notes, listeners' asks sponsored at a dollar each, and a share of every membership that starts through it. Free to set up.

RECORDING

- Remote, on your platform (Riverside, Zoom, StreamYard, Zencastr).
- Quiet room, wired connection, external mic. Video or audio-only.
- Central time. Weekday mornings and evenings work best.
- He shares every episode to his own audience and the RRC Facebook group.
